2015 Second Take Mataro

new to the crew

Yowsers! Hold your horses; what's that? A 100% whole bunch Mataro from the Barossa!
SECOND TAKE - have that second glance.

What do we love about this variety? The kinship of the three Rhone varieties (Shiraz, Grenache, Mataro,) has become a Rhone direction for the Barossa. Stand-alone Mataro. 'The Barossa is not all about Shiraz' Michael says...

Yelland and Papps is a story about new beginnings, a story about a couple with a young family, forging their own path within a region as first generation winegrowers. One of the producers leading the region into the future while showing a deep respect for the past, experimenting with new varieties and techniques and aiming for a sustainable future that they can pass on to the next generation.

Yelland and Papps SECOND TAKE Range throws the traditional Australian winemaking book out the winery door to practice more old world techniques. New world wine in an old world way...released less than 1 year from vintage. The 2015 Second Take vintage release also includes Vermentino, Roussanne, Grenache and Shiraz.

The Second Take range evolved in several stages. Initiated in 2012, introducing a percentage of whole bunch to two fermenting separate parcels of Shiraz and Grenache. It became obvious that these individual parcels shouldn't be blended back.

The second stage started with Susan and Michael's love of Roussanne; attempting to introduce a more textural component. Just before bottling and filtering, they decided not to filter as it had the texture component they were looking for.

2014 saw the introduction of a Vermentino. Fermented on skins and left there for over 200 days to create a textural, funky, left field style of Vermentino.

The 2015 vintage in the Barossa was ideal; stretching out nicely and producing fruit with great flavour and balance. The perfect conditions to maximise on savoury, spicy Mataro with minimal intervention. 100% whole bunch, 8 months in old seasoned French oak - unfiltered and unfined.

So that's the Second Take crew for 2015, so sit back, put your feet up and have a glass.

Cheers
Susan & Michael Papps
